Professor Art Costa talks about the Habits of Mind Hub

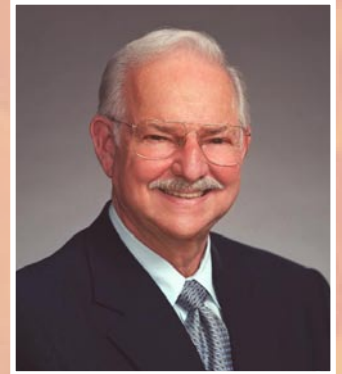

...truly impressive...

... pushing the level of complexity and sophistication beyond all previous levels...

... extending the application and development of the Habits of Mind...

...payoff for their students at both personal and academic levels...

The work of James Anderson and the participating Hub schools and educators is truly impressive. Under James' leadership and coordination, they are pushing the level of complexity and sophistication of the Habits of Mind beyond all previous work. They are making new connections and developing archives of effective practices. They are extending the application and development of the Habits of Mind to new and diverse situations. Not only has James ignited a blaze of enthusiasm for the participants as they link and think together, they are beginning to see payoff for their students at both personal and academic levels. As students are becoming more aware of the Habits of Mind, they are using them as an internal "value-compass" to guide their decisions, their actions and their thoughts.

If you choose to join the Hub, be prepared to make new friends, to have your mind stretched, and to gain new insights about how to foster essential and enduring lifelong learning.
